LAST SERMONS BY DR. JENKENS

Before Going to His New Charge, Was Preached Sunday.

HEARD BY BIG CROWDS

Young Pastor Given Up By His Church With Universal Regret.

Rev. Millard A. Jenkins preached his farewell sermons here Sunday morning and evening at the Baptist church. The evening sermon, which concluded his services as pastor, was a discourse of great power and eloquence, a fitting finale to Dr. Jenkins' pastorate. The subject was "Demons and Demonology," divided into three parts, fallen angels, demons and Satan himself.

Dr. Jenkins will leave today for

Athens, Ga., where he has accepted a call to the First Baptist Church there. He came here from Dublin, Ga., Nov. 16, 1906, and during the period he has been here, a little more than two years, he has admitted about 300 members, the present membership of the church being about 800. His resignation was accepted with the greatest reluctance and he leaves here to the infinite regret of all his members and carrying with him the good will of the whole city. No pastor in the city has ever had so large congregations from Sunday to Sunday as he had during the entire time he was here.

Dr. Jenkins is unquestionably one of the ablest young men of his denomination in the South, and as a popular preacher, has but few equals.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT

Howard Brame Sustains Fracture of His Only Arm.

Howard Brame, the popular liveryman, was kicked by a mule Thursday and his arm broken in two places. Some years ago Mr. Brame had one of his arms mangled in a threshing and amputation was necessary. The fracture this time is a painful one, but will not prove more serious than to completely disable Mr. Brame for some time. The injury was attended to by a surgeon and he is now getting along nicely.

SLIGHT SHOCK OF EARTHQUAKE

A HOLIDAY SHAKE-UP.

Out in Montana There Was a Sure Enough Shock That Cracked Walls.

A distinct earthquake shock was felt in this city and surrounding country Sunday afternoon about three o'clock.

Windows of houses were rattled and in some cases houses were shaken perceptibly. Parties who were out of doors in the country report that a meteor was seen to fall across the western sky at the same instant the shock was felt.

No damage was done and the quake was so slight that it did not attract general attention.

Severe Shock in Montana.

Butte, Mont., Dec. 28.—A Miner dispatch from Virginia City, Mont., last night stated that at 4:30 o'clock that afternoon that section was shaken by the severest of a series of seismic disturbances that have been going on for more than a week. The electric power and light plant was put out of commission and the city was in darkness at night. Much alarm exists. During the past week Virginia City has experienced more than thirty earthquakes in which the earth movement was very pronounced.

The tremor cracked buildings, threw down plaster and dislodged dishes from shelves and tables.

WILL CONSIDER CALL.

Dr. Garrett Invited to Visit This City Next Sunday.

A letter was read at the Baptist church Sunday from Rev. R. B. Garrett, of Portsmouth, Va., saying he would consider the call for pastor and give a definite answer by Jan. 3, 1909. Dr. Garrett said the matter would have to be laid before his church and his doctor would be consulted about the change of climate for his wife, who is an invalid. The probable benefit to his wife's health would be the strongest influence in accepting the call, as he was meeting with much success in his work in Portsmouth and his church was united in his support, and expected him to continue the work he had carried on there for ten years. A resolution was adopted by the church inviting Dr. Garrett to come to Hopkinsville and look over the field and preach next Sunday, which would probably aid him in arriving at a decision.

A rising vote renewing the call was taken, the vote being unanimous.

There are many people who suffer from backache, rheumatism, lumbago and similar ailments who are not aware these are symptoms of kidney trouble. Pineales for the kidneys act as a tonic and regulator to kidneys and bladder and purify the blood. 30 days' trial $1. Sold by Anderson-Fowler Drug Co. Incorporated.

The parlor was handsomely decorated with palms, evergreens and similar plants and was lighted with candles. The only attendants were the bride's sister, Miss Virginia Butler, as maid of honor and Mr. Gregory as best man. After receiving congratulations they were invited into the dining room, which was beautifully decorated and in which was a table that groaned under its load. Dinner was served in courses. The bride received many handsome presents, too numerous to mention.

SHOT HIMSELF THROUGH HEART

JUST FROM CHURCH.

Telephoned His Mother Before Firing The Fatal Shot.

Roy Rogers, of the Consolation neighborhood, North Christian, committed suicide Sunday afternoon about 1 o'clock by shooting. He was about 22 years old, unmarried, the youngest son of Mr. Press B. Rogers, and made his home with his father.

The young man attended church at Palestine Sunday morning, returning home after services. The family was away from home and when he arrived at the residence he telephoned his mother, who was at a neighbor's, to come home. Mrs. Rogers told him to come over and take dinner with them. The son then said that he did not want any dinner, but again asked his mother to come home. Shortly after dinner Mrs. Rogers returned home and found her son dead. He was lying across the bed. Young Rogers had used his father's pistol, which contained only one cartridge, and shot himself through the heart. The ball passed through the young man's body and imbedded itself in the wall of the building.

It is reported that Rogers, while returning home from church, said to an acquaintance that he intended killing himself. He left no note concerning his intention of self-destruction, however.

The body was interred in the family burying ground yesterday afternoon.

BLOWING IN THE YULE.

Quaint Christmas, Glimpse of an Old Town in Denmark.

Blowing in the Yule from the grim old tower that had stood 800 years against the blasts of the North sea was one of the customs of the old town that while, however, it faces with the Yule: that I know, says Jacob A. in his article entitled "Yuletide in the Old Town," in the Christmas Centennial. At sundown, while the people at breakfast, the town band climbed the many steep ladders to the top of the tower, and up there in fair weather or foul—and sometimes in the great gusts from the wistful sea—they played four old hymns, one to each corner of the compass, so that no one was forgotten. They always began with Luther's sturdy challenge, "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God," while down below we listened devoutly.

There was something both weird and beautiful about those faraway strains. In the early morning light of the northern winter, something that was not of earth and that suggested to my mind's imagination, the angels came on far Judgment hills. Even now, after all these years, the memory of it does that. It could not have been because the music was so rare, for the band was made up of small, commonplace and artisans who thus turned an hour of penny on festive occasions. Inconspicuously enough, I think the official town mourner, who had people's funerals, was one of them. It was like the burglar's guard, the colonel of which—were thought him at least a general because of the huge brass belt he trailed when he marched at the head of his men—was the town tailor, a very small but very martial man. But, whether or not, it was beautiful. I have never heard music since that so moved me. When the last strain died away came the big bells that sent deep voices that sang far out over field and heath, and our Yule was fairly under way.

TO HELP INJURED AUTOISTS.

First Aid Society of Automobile Girls Formed in Denver.

A society for first aid to injured automobilists has been formed by girls of Denver's younger social set. They have decided that because auto accidents are becoming so frequent women should know what to do when members of their auto parties are injured. It is suggested that the society may become national in its scope.

Among those who are attending the lecture given by Dr. William Edmondson of Denver are Emma Phillips, daughter of the famous millionaire, Mrs. Harold Kountze of the New York family of bankers, Miss May Kistler, Miss Edith Thomas and others. The young women are learning to reduce sprains, bind up fractured limbs, make and apply bandages and stop the flow of blood by scientific methods. The idea suggested itself when one of the girls sustained a sprained ankle. It did not receive proper treatment at the time, and as a result the girl suffered severely.

NOVEL TRAINING STUD.

Baseball Catcher Chases Jack Rabbit to Keep in Condition.

Keeping in condition trying to run a jack rabbit down each day is the stunt being tried by Catcher George Gibson of the Pittsburgh Nationals at his home, near London, Ont. Barney Dryfus recently received a letter from Pittsburgh from Gibson, which read in part as follows: "I had a letter from Chief Wilson the other day. He writes about my hunting. He says the quality are thick down where he is that you have to cut a path through them when you go hunting. Nothing like that up here. I have seen a long line of jack rabbits, and I have been chasing him to keep in condition, but to date I have not captured him. He is the limit in speed. One jump and he is in the next county. He would make a good trainer. If I can catch him alive I will take him to Hot Springs and let the boys get in condition by chasing him."

PRESIDENT'S HUNTING BOOTS

Footgear For African Trip to Be Made Over Casts of His Feet.

President Roosevelt has ordered his hunting shoes. They really are boots reaching almost to the knee, and the measurements by which they are to be made are the most complete ever received by a Brockton (Mass.) factory. Orders were given for four pairs of boots, all to be duplicated. Each of the president's feet was carefully measured. In all nearly fifty measurements were taken. By them plastic casts will be made of the president's feet and legs, and the shoes literally will be built "to the feet." The shoes which must be absolutely waterproof are to have an extra double sole, into which the uppers are to be sewed with waterproof stitches.

AUTO HEATING DEVICE.

Missouri Uses a Special Boot and Register Over the Exhaust Pipe.

H. A. Fowler of Kansas City, Mo., is an autoist who believes in being comfortable while enjoying his favorite pastime, and to accomplish this in the cold weather he has arranged a device on his car which is easy to reproduce on nearly any car and which is calculated to prove a boon to the motorist, who heretofore has never been able to keep comfortably warm while driving in winter.

Mr. Fowler explains that, like many another winter driver, he has felt the need of something to take the place of the cumbersome lap robe, which interferes with the operation of the foot brake and clutch pedal and which makes driving with an accelerator almost an impossibility. His device is intended to meet this need, and Mr. Fowler declares that it has more than fulfilled his expectations in practice.

The device consists of a simple register such as one in a house heated by the old fashioned hot water furnace set into the front door of the car directly over the exhaust pipe, which in many cars leads out underneath the car. Air circulates through the register, is heated by it and rises up through the register to maintain a grateful warmth around the feet of the driver and of his companion, a position which Mr. Fowler's device is likely to make the most desirable in the car.

In conjunction with his register Mr. Fowler uses a boot which he has had especially fashioned to button down on the front of the car and to both sides. It does not interfere with the driving of the car and yet serves every purpose of the regular robe.

BEST CHRISTMAS GIFT.

The Desire For Giving, Says Elizabeth N. Phillips—Our Need of Love.

If I were the nation's Santa Claus I would on my trip across the world on Christmas eve, I would drop into every heart the gift of the "spirit of giving," says Elizabeth N. Phillips, president of the Philadelphia Santa Claus association, in a symposium, "If I Were a National Santa Claus," in the December Delinquent. I would visit each home where love and affection had grown cold and kindle the fires anew. I would see that every orphan had not only a pair of shoes to wear, but a little love, but a love that might take the place of a mother's love to warm his little heart. I would see that he had not only a coat to protect him from the winter's cold, but a sheltering arm that might take the place of a father's in protecting him from the blasts of a freezing world of thoughtless people.

Were I the "nation's Santa Claus" the "spirit of giving" would exist in every heart every day, and there would be no desire for great riches and power, no employer grinding down the wages of his employed, no public official using his trust for private gain and no religious creeds and traditions serve him as a shield. In Christ's words: "Do you love me, Simon? Then feed my lambs." And so, if I were in my power to give, I would leave not only in every city, street and house but in every heart, a living, loving Santa Claus, and the world would awaken on his Christmas day in paradise, with love as king.

HARD WINTER PREDICTION.

Massachusetts Gobbler Forecasts Thirty-five Snowstorms.

For the fifth time in a half century Charles H. Stetson, a veteran cobbler of Brookfield, Mass., and a noted weather prophet, has aroused the interest of thousands of farmers and followers throughout western Massachusetts by announcing his weather prediction as to the number of snowstorms for the year. He says that the winter of 1909-10 will show a total of thirty-five. His rule is as follows: To the acre of the moon on the date of the month in which the first storm occurs add the date of the month in which the storm happens and the number of the day of the week. The total gives the total number of storms.

Novelty For Christmas Supper.

An unusual little supper time Christmas surprise which was served to a family party last year this says the December Delinquent: Flaky baked powder biscuits—in some localities known as "quick biscuits"—had been made just after dinner. While they had ample time to cool, they were still very soft and fresh. The guests of each little biscuit was piled off with a fork and as much of the inside removed as could be easily done without disturbing the shape of the outside. At the last moment the remnants of the turkey were mixed with celery and a few capers, and, with mayonnaise dressing which had been made the day previous, a delicious salad mixture was ready in a few moments.

The Holiday Preliminaries.

I am making out my list. For of cash I've not a farthing. And nobody must be missed. Oh, dear me! For the list it stretches so I agree with those who show More elastic now should grow Currency.

Of friends I have a lot And relations on the spot From a grandpa to a tot. And for each A present I must buy Which will please their critic eye, And the list I will deny, Is a peach!

Not a one must I forget Or a row there'll be, you bet. With a firm, a snub, a stare, To rebuke. While the clock ticks fast But I've got to stand it flat. And let it go at that.

Alas! I fear.

—Joel Wink in Baltimore American.

Do You Feel Chilly, Then Feverish and Ache all Over?

Feel Worn-out, Blue and Tired? Have You a Fresh Cold, With Frequent Hacking Cough? Sensation of Soreness in the Chest or Back?

Don't let your case run into bronchitis, or some other obstinate and dangerous malady. The very best medicine to take in such a case is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Made without alcohol or dangerous drugs, it contains that rare combination of native medicinal roots that will attack a cough (from its seat, as it were), restore the circulation, soothe the appetite and digestion, and consequently restore tone to the entire system. That is the reason people look happy, once more after taking it—they feel like living, because their liver is active, the blood in their arteries is full of that life-giving quality—rich, red blood. The blood in turn feeds the nerves.

Nervousness and neuralgia are only the indication that the nerves are not fed on invigorating blood. This "Medical Discovery" of Dr. Pierce is nature's own restorer. It tones up the organism and invigorates its functions, furnishing to each one of its necessary constituent principles of which it is in need.

This preparation is of pleasant taste, agrees perfectly with rebellious and sensitive stomachs, and is extremely effective in restoring tone and vigor to the entire system. It cures troubles of the stomach and at the same time the blood-vessels are given such a toning up as to throw off a cold. One very good reason why it restores the tone of run-down, pale and emaciated people is because it first throws out the poisons thronging the liver and kidneys. It then begins its reconstructive work by building up flesh and making good, rich, red blood. "I have been a sufferer from indigestion for some thirty years," writes S. W. Mullins, of Greenville, W. Va., "and have used medicine from several of our best physicians, which gave me only a little temporary relief. Last winter I was stricken with such severe pains in the pit of my stomach that I could neither work nor sleep, and my weight went down from one hundred and thirty pounds to one hundred and thirty in about two months' time. I then consulted with Dr. J. C. Foster and Dr. J. C. Golden Medical Discovery, up the time the first bottle was used I felt a relief of my suffering, and after a few more bottles I was able to resume my usual work. I am truly thankful for the great benefit I have received from your medicine, and can cordially recommend it to others."

It Stands Alone not only in its effect on the stomach, but also as a true medicine for stomach, liver and blood disorders, which absolutely contains purity, vegetable and perfectly harmless ingredients, with no alcohol.

It Stands Alone as the best all-around medicine for the stomach, liver and blood disorders, which absolutely contains purity, vegetable and perfectly harmless ingredients, with no alcohol.

The Weather.

FOR KENTUCKY—Probably rain Tuesday.

DO AS OTHERS DO.

The following figures are approximately correct as to the tobacco sold by the Planters' Association and the stocks now on hand and controlled by pledges:

Sold crop of 1914.....	23,000 hhd.
" " " 1905.....	34,000 "
" " " 1906.....	39,000 "
" " " 1907.....	43,000 "

Total sales 4 years.....139,000 hhd.

ON HAND.

Crop of 1907.....19,000 hhd.
Pledged 1908.....100,000 hhd.
Present holdings.....119,000 hhd.

In view of these figures, it is not surprising that the agitation of the "no crop for 1909" idea has been started, by the adoption of resolutions in Princeton during the conference between Mr. Ewing and the representatives of the Imperial Tobacco Company. This proposition could not have been incorporated in the resolutions, with the association leaders in Princeton, without their knowledge, and it may be concluded without their approval. It is doubtful if the Association can survive a decree of this sort, with no less than six other associations in Western Kentucky, nearly all of them committed to the loose sales policy. If Mr. Ewing commits the association to the "no crop" idea, the members of the Farmers' Union, the Society of Equity, the Farmers' Mutual, the Henderson Stemming District Association, the Owensboro Green River Association, and the Burley Association will no doubt increase their crops, just as the Planters' Association did this year while the Burley people were trying the "no crop" experiment. The folly of this policy is shown by the Government's reports of an increased crop in the country at large, much of it grown in new territory, in spite of the sacrifice made by one district to curtail the crop. If the Association continues to refuse to sell its marketable holdings until all of its damaged tobacco for which it has no buyers has been forced upon unwilling purchasers, the dissatisfaction is likely to become widespread.

The association, if properly managed, will become a permanent blessing to its members, but arrangements must be made for prompt sales when crops are ready for the market. Mr. Ewing seems to be the only man who does not recognize this necessity. The association this year carried over nearly half its holdings until fall and the sales now being made are at such heavy losses that many hogheads graded at $10 to $15 originally are setting only $5 or $6, after expenses are paid. In four years the Association has sold an average of 35,000 hogheads annually. It now has on hand more tobacco than it can sell in three years at that rate, because the best customers cannot handle prize tobacco and are forced to buy in Henderson, Owensboro and Bowling Green tobacco which cannot get in Hopkinsville, Clarksville and Paducah. The Kentuckian is for the association and has heretofore been for Mr. Ewing as its proper leader, but the obstinacy of one man should not be permitted to wreck the association and drive its members into other organizations that have better success in selling tobacco. It is reported that 3,700 hogheads were sampled at Clarksville for the Regie buyers and that some of it had been sampled two or three times before, and out of that vast offering the Regie people found only 550 hogheads that they could use. If neither the Imperial Tobacco Co. nor the Regie buyers can handle the 19,000 or 19,000 hogheads left over, and rendered more undesirable and of less value every week, what is to become of this tobacco that has been held 15 months and is going bankrupt at from $4 to $6 net? It seems with an object lesson like this before him, Mr. Ewing ought to listen to the petitions of his own members and change a policy that every other dark tobacco association has discarded as impracticable and sell the new crop loose. The Imperial Tobacco Co. is said, will bring 5,000,000 pounds of the tobacco bought from the Stemming District Association last week at $10 to $7 for leaf, an average of $8 loose, to their factory here for $8 to $10. This is in the face of the fact that the bars of Christian county are crowded with tobacco of the stemming types that the Imperial Company will take if furnished to them like the tobacco of the Stemming District is furnished.

Why not do as others do, and sell it?

It comes to the Kentuckian from apparently reliable sources that preparations are being made to open a large floor salesroom in this city next week. We do not believe this is a wise step and we hope to see the proposed enterprise abandoned. The crop of this county and adjoining counties is practically all pledged to the tobacco organizations and those who signed the agreements should live up to their pledges. We hope no warehouseman will attempt to encourage the breaking of contracts, which would be sure to create more bad feeling at a time when the city and country are rapidly returning to normal conditions.

Pittsburg's municipal graft scandal is the worst on record and it bids fair to cause an upheaval of gigantic proportions. Two bankers and half a dozen councilmen are already under arrest on bribery charges and it is said that forty or fifty councilmen are liable to be caught in the net. The scandal may have a potent effect on the coming city election next February. Every faction of politics is stirred to the utmost, and a flood of denials are being made by prospective candidates that they are not implicated directly or indirectly in the corruption.

The defense began the taking of testimony in the night rider case at Union City yesterday and each of the eight defendants will attempt to prove alibi. The state has made out a very strong case and the general opinion is that some if not all of the defendants will be given death sentences.

There was a good deal doing Christmas day, both at home and abroad. There were the usual number of killings, several people playing Santa Claus had their paraphernalia set on fire and the president of France had his whiskers pulled by a crank.

Three other night riders at Union City, have offered to confess to save themselves, but the prosecution says it is too late and that they have all of the testimony needed to convict.

Gov. Cox, while Gov. Willson was absent in Washington last week, issued a proclamation declaring Saturday a holiday.

The trial of Beach Hargis at Irvine, for the murder of his father, resulted in a hung jury. The jury was dismissed Saturday.

It is said that President Roosevelt has contracted with Francis J. Heney, the San Francisco grocery broker, to prosecute the Pittsburg bank graft cases, as a special examiner.

Evidence in the night rider cases in Tennessee shows that they were arranged to attend to the circuit judge when their damnable plans were cut short by arrest and incarceration. This is just a little ahead of anything that has developed in Kentucky.—State Journal.

How about Judge Reed, Judge Hill, Judge Wells, Judge Crumbaugh and Judge Prowse, all of whom have antagonized the night riders and were placed on their list. Judge Jones is the judicial hero of the tobacco war, but Kentucky is not altogether without some good and true men on the bench.

Cipriana Castro's downfall seems to be complete. His brother, Celestino Castro, chief of the department Tachura, has recognized the authority of Gomez, the new president, who is straightening out the troubles Castro left Venezuela in when he sailed for France. The boundary line dispute with Colombia has been settled, the Castro political prisoners have been released, the monopolies he established have been abolished and press censorship has been removed. Gomez seems to be a strong and fearless leader and it is expected will soon restore order.

The union labor trouble at Stearnes, Ky., reached such a critical point Saturday that the Stearnes Coal & Lumber Co. asked for troops to protect their property, and the Lexington and Somerset companies were sent to Stearnes. The town is in Whitley county and in a fight Christmas day between U. S. marines and miners, Marshal John Mullens and Richard Ross, a miner, were killed, Marshals Tate and Ryan were wounded and several miners more or less injured. Ryan, who was wounded, is missing and it is feared he has met his death at the hands of the rioters.

A Girl and A Garden.

By Frank H. Williams.
Copyright, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

"I could love you," said the pretty neighbor, and then as the man impatiently reached for her she added quickly, "for your garden."

"The man's face fell. 'Now, I call that downright mean!' declared the man vigorously. 'You're a nice, pretty neighbor. I've been courting you and making love to you for months, and now I find that it's not me, but my garden, that's made an impression. I'll sell the garden,' he added roughly.

The pretty neighbor clasped her hands in real distress. "Oh, don't," she cried. "You don't really mean that! Think how long it's been in your family! Think how much care your mother and your grandmother and your great-grandmother spent on all those dear flowers!"

"Time I was selling it!" growled the man. "I'll get an old factory, a bakery or something of that sort here!" "Oh, oh!" cried the pretty neighbor. "I mean it!" cried the man. "I'll start right away."

Wholly distressed, the pretty neighbor, her hands tightly clinched, watched the man as he went down one of the paths toward a gay little summer house.

She was standing near a wall, beside a little fountain, and all about her the garden was a bower of beauty. Vistas between the trees radiated from her, and her great-grandmother's plan of the trees. She could hardly realize that

"WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO?" THE GIRL ASKED.

The big, hurrying city was just on the other side of the wall. The man came out. In one hand he carried a big white board, in the other a bucket of paint and a brush. When he reached the pretty neighbor he placed the board against the wall and with out a word took to the brush.

"What are you going to do?" the girl asked somewhat tremulously.

"Paint," answered the man laconically.

With fascinated eyes the girl watched him as the letters grew under his brush. Across the top of the board he painted in big brutal letters the words, "For Sale."

The pretty neighbor caught her breath as the cruel sentence, hurried, struck her from the board. Underneath these words the man worked industriously for a little time.

While he worked the girl gazed back at the board with tear dimmed eyes. When he had finished the man gave a little sigh of satisfaction. The girl looked at the sign again and gasped, "For Sale!" it read. "This garden, suitable for a factory. Apply Within to Martin Connor."

"You—you aren't going to nail that sign up, are you?" questioned the girl, nervously close to tears.

"Sure!" ejaculated the man.

The man picked up the sign, holding it awkwardly to save his clothes from paint, and with the bucket and brush in the other hand, again went toward the gay little summer house. He whistled as he went, but the girl, who followed, with dimly stifled her sobs, deposited his painting utensils and secured hammer and nails. Still whistling, he led the way through a secluded iron gate to the street.

Once outside, the man carefully nailed the sign to the wall. When the work was finished he stepped back a bit to admire it. The girl, who had watched the proceedings, cried out at this.

"You're perfectly bored," she cried. "I hate you!"

When the pretty neighbor, frantically dabbling at her eyes with an absurd little handkerchief, ran across the street to her own home.

The next morning she could not think at what time sorrow was near her. Then it came to her in a jump. The garden was for sale. She stood aghast at the thought of the heartless sign and decided that she would never, never look at it again.

A moment later she was at the window, peering out at the garden wall opposite. Her heart gave a little bound as the black face of the wall met her gaze. The sign was gone.

It was a very merry pretty neighbor that hailed Martin shortly after.

"Hello!" cried the pretty neighbor, joyfully walking through the little iron gate into the garden—"Ho, I knew you didn't mean to sell your garden! You thought you'd scare me into loving you!"

"The man, who had been weeding, looked up at her. He wore an old broad-brimmed hat, but that in no way made him any less handsome than ever.

"You're wrong," he declared slowly. "It's sold!"

"What?" cried the pretty neighbor in consternation.

"Yes," replied the man. "And some one's going to put up a horrid, grimy factory here!" wailed the pretty neighbor.

"Perhaps," said the man listlessly. "I'm glad you care over!" he went on. "It was a fright I'd have to go without saying goodly to you."

"Goodby!" said the girl, her face a picture of surprise and dismay.

"Yes," the man went on, "I'm going away. My train leaves at noon. You may never see me again."

"Why are you going?" stammered the pretty neighbor very woefully.

The man looked up at her quickly. "There's nothing for me to stay here for," he replied without animation, evidently not finding what he hoped in the girl's face.

"I'm sorry," said the girl finally.

She extended her hand. In silence he shook it. Slowly she went toward the gate. When she was almost there the man called to her.

"I'm a brute," he declared contritely, "for letting you think for a minute that I'd ever really let a factory be erected here. Since you love the garden so you're a right to know that the man who has bought it is your father. He will not disturb it for some time—not for the present at least."

"Oh!" cried the girl. For a moment her face was radiant, then suddenly it went sad again.

"Wouldn't you—won't you come back some time and visit my father's garden?" she asked.

"No, I'll not come back," the man replied. "It—it would hurt too much. Goodby!"

"Goodby," repeated the girl and slowly went through the little iron gate, across the street to her home.

Several times during the next hour she looked at the clock and involuntarily sighed. The morning was going very fast, it seemed. Faster and faster the time flew on toward noon. Presently it was 10:30, then 10:45 and then 11 o'clock.

When the morning reached this point the pretty neighbor was suddenly galvanized into action.

"Good gracious," she cried, jumping from the chair where she had been endeavoring to read a book, "the garden he may be gone, and I haven't found out where he is going!"

Without more ado the pretty neighbor raced out of the house and across the street to the little iron gate. The gate was locked. Wildly she tore around the wall to the great front gate. Through this she ran up the steps, across the street to her home.

Suddenly, as at high speed she bore around a particularly sharp curve, she plumped right into the arms of the man. The latter, when he saw that it was the pretty neighbor, dropped the suit case he had been carrying and drew her closely to him.

"Dear, dear sweetheart," he cried, "I simply can't leave you. I can't do it!"

He hugged her so tightly that she fairly gasped for breath. However, the pretty neighbor had enough breath left to gasp a reply—a very faint reply.

"Don't go," she said, burrowing her head into his coat. "Don't go. It's not your garden I want. It's not your garden I'm in love with. It's you!"

She started a Van Dyck. His wife watched its growth critically. She didn't like it—she said she married a young man, not a professor. The whiskers grew and grew, and hubbly looked more and more like a pirate. Why try to talk him out of them, but he insisted they were an actual necessity in his profession.

One morning Jones woke up with his chin feeling moist and sticky. He rubbed his hand over his face, looked in the mirror and found it wet. Then he opened his eyes and saw his wife standing over him with a box of powder in her hand. "Face" with alarm, he jumped out of bed and over to the mirror. Already the stuff that makes blonds to order had done its work. That princely growth was red, yellow and malarial, even as the growing corn. Jones had to wipe the dust off his razor and remove the chin weeds.

"If I suppose you think you're doing something pretty smart," he observed to Mrs. Jones grumpily as he remodeled another bunch. "You've ruined my profession, that's what you've done."

"Father smooth shaved and combed," averred his wife sweetly, "than whiskered luxury."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

DOO TORPEDOED BY AWFUL RHOGR

PERFECT RECOVERY IS DUE TO CUTICURA

"With the exception of his hands and feet, my son Clyde (thirteen years old) was almost completely covered with eczema. Physicians treated him for nearly a year without helping him any. While they were very kind and did all in their power, yet nothing seemed to relieve him. And I had tried many remedies sent to me by kind friends but they all failed. His head, face and neck were covered with large scabs which he would rub until they fell off. Then blood and matter would come out and that would be worse. Many a time he looked as if his ears would drop off. Friends came to see him and said that if he got well he could be disgraced for life. When it seemed as if I could possibly stand it no longer, I decided to try Cuticura. I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment, and a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, and used them in the evening and that was the first night for nearly a year that he slept. His may sound exaggerated to you, but in the morning there was a great change for the better. In about six weeks he could not have told that he had ever had anything wrong with him. I treated him twice for a month, and at present he has a fine complexion and not a scar on his body. This cure may seem overdone, but neither words nor pen can describe Clyde's suffering and how he looked. Our leading physician, Dr. J. W. Remond, of the Cuticura Remedies Co., writes: 'Mrs. Alice Cockburn, Shiloh, O., June 11, 1907.'

Frequent shampoos with Cuticura Soap and wet dressings with Cuticura stop falling hair, remove dandruff, and dandruff, destroy hair parasites, soothe irritated, itching surfaces, stimulate the hair follicles, supply the roots with nourishment, loosen the skin, and make the hair grow up to a sweet, wholesome, healthy scalp, when all other remedies fail.

Gov. Willson's Record.

The Owensboro Messenger in an editorial on a record of one year says the Governor, by abuse of the pardoning power, has done more to encourage the mob spirit than any other agency that has been at work in Kentucky for years. In his campaign he declared he would see to it that Powers and others accused of the murder of Goebel should have fair trials, but early in his administration he pardoned Powers without further trial, and Howard was released with that. It is well understood that pardons are a waste. Taylor and Finley at a convenient time. When Fulton French was fined $5,000 for conspiracy in the bloody Harbinger tragedies, Willson remitted the fine. Numerous other criminals have been granted immunity; but his last act in commuting the sentence of the negro Hoeker, at Lexington, from hanging to life imprisonment, will do more toward the encouragement of mob spirit than anything that has happened in a long time.

"He Went Back to His Old Tricks. You ingrate!" exclaimed the frate judge, addressing the culprit. "This gentleman took a rather interesting interest in you, but you have been so good and so good, and he gave you a job in his store, did he not?"

"Yes, sir."

"And when he left you alone in the place one day you repaid his gratitude by sneaking behind the desk and rifling the cash drawer, didn't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Now, why did you do this?"

"I got remorse of conscience, judge," New York Times.

LISTLESS READING.

The Way to Correct This Fault and Get Beneficial Results.

"Reading can be made a much greater source of pleasure to those who now only read when they can find no other pleasures," said a Columbia university lecturer on English literature.

"You have perhaps noticed with what keen sense of satisfaction some people read the newspapers. Do you want to know the secret of their ability to extract enjoyment in this way? Well, you have probably noticed that those who can so rivet their attention to the printed page are the ones who make it point to talk about what they have read.

"That is the secret. Try it. Read something, then tell some one about it. Do this with books as well as with papers. Soon you will notice that in reading a story you fix in your mind the things you want to relate. You get the writer's point of view, then you fix upon the points he has presented.

"At the beginning your story telling will be crude and unpolished, but as you write, and you will notice that your shortcomings in this direction are due to listless reading. This will correct itself. You will find that your ambition to become a reader for all there is in reading. I have given this bit of advice before and have been thanked many times by those who followed my directions. 'Try it and mark the results.'—Exchange.

DEEP SEA DIVING.

A Descent of Thirty Fathoms Marks the Limit of Safety.

The depth to which a diver can descend is limited by his power for withstanding the pressure of the water. Apparently a descent of thirty fathoms (180 feet) of water marks the limit of safety for even a few divers who possess the necessary physical fitness in combination with a disregard for danger beyond the average.

Records in deep sea diving have to be accepted with the proverbial grain of salt. It has been claimed that a diver reached thirty-three fathoms and a half while engaged in salvage operations recently on the west coast of South America, and yet again another diver working on the same wreck is reported to have brought up three bars of copper from a depth of forty fathoms at the expense of his life.

An expert who has superintended a large number of diving operations has found that very few men, whatever their build, are capable of withstanding the severe strain which is brought to bear upon their physical energies for a few minutes at a depth of twenty or thirty fathoms. Many of his divers dared not venture below ten fathoms. Of 352 divers employed at greater depths thirty were seriously injured, and the result was fatal in ten instances.—Harper's.

Papering Damp Walls.

An excellent and comparatively inexpensive way to paper damp walls is the following: Paint corrugated cardboard, such as is sold for packing bottles, etc., on both sides with asphalt varnish, and fix it with dried with free-eight inch tacks to the damp wall so that the smooth surface is directed toward the room and the corrugations run from ceiling to floor. The cardboard should be fastened to the wall so that the floor level one-half inch should be left uncovered. The cardboard should then be covered with coarse hessians or other packing material on which a plain covering paper and lastly the wall hangings may be pasted. The skirting board should be removed while tacking on the cardboard, which should have small holes of an inch in length made in the raised corrugations at intervals of ten to twelve inches while it is attached to the wall.—Architects and Builders' Journal.

Embarrassing.

A rather pompous looking deacon in a certain city church was asked to take charge of a class of boys during the absence of the regular teacher. While endeavoring to impress upon their young minds the importance of living a Christian life the following question was propounded:

"Why do people call me a Christian, children?" the worthy deacon asked, standing very erect and smiling down upon them.

"Because they don't know you," was the ready answer of a bright eyed little boy, responding to the ingratiating smile with one equally guileless and winning.—Lippincott's.

Only a Lack of Facilities.

Clara's aunt took her for a visit to Niagara falls. After viewing the great waterfall for some time and the little girl failing to make any remarks, she tried to draw some expression from her as to what she thought of the spectacle. Finally she said:

"Clara, don't you think the falls are beautiful, wonderful?" and was amazed at the child's nonchalant reply:

"Oh, yes, I suppose so, but I think our creek at home could do it in a place."—Woman's Home Companion.

Knew It All.

One Sunday morning little Bobby showed signs of having something on his mind. Finally he mustered up courage and addressed his father thus: "Say, papa, don't you think it is time for me to go to the Sunday school?"—Chicago News.

FINE BIG GAME SEASON

Deer Hunters in Maine Met With Excellent Success.

HUNTING CONDITIONS IDEAL.

Over 1,600 Deer and About Seventy Moose Shipped by One Railroad Alone—Loss of Life Small—Humorous Experiences With Moose and Deer—Women Enjoyed the Sport.

In many respects this has been the most remarkable "big game" hunting season in Maine, the maritime province and Newfoundland for a number of years. Even in Vermont, where the open season on deer has been comparatively short, hunters have unusually good luck, about 900 deer having been killed during the first two days.

All the returning Nimrods who have gathered from coast to coast to their homes in New York, Pennsylvania, the west and the south have been agreed, says a Boston correspondent of the New York Post, that they have seldom seen more deer in the Maine wilderness or been able to hunt under more enjoyable conditions.

In the earlier part of the season, down in Maine the warm weather and the absence of snow on the ground were considerable of a handicap to the hunters, the dry leaves rendering it difficult to get within range of the acute eared quarry, but latterly conditions have improved a great deal. While bull moose and bears have been somewhat less plentiful than last season, the woods have been swarming with deer, and few visiting sportsmen have had any difficulty in securing their quota. Parties also have been unusually plentiful as a result of the early arrival of summer.

During the first six weeks of the hunting season more than 1,600 deer and about seventy moose were shipped over the Bangor and Aroostook railroad alone, a considerable increase over the 1907 figures for the same period. Taking it altogether, the big game hunting season has turned out much better than was generally expected. The open season for moose closed Dec. 1, and for deer it will close Dec. 15.

As usual, the wilderness has furnished its tragedies and its comedies, but fortunately the loss of human life has been small. One of the amusing cases of "mistaken identity" is that in which a Houlton (Me.) hunter figured, as reported to the writer by a Boston friend who was there at the time. This luckless sportsman, who was by no means new to the business, fired at and killed a valuable colt in a clearing, thinking it was a young moose. The affair happened in the dusk, and he didn't discover his mistake until after he had cut the throat of the supposed moose.

Greatly disturbed and being a conscientious man, he took all the money he had in his pockets—$240—and carried it to the front door of the farmhouse where he supposed the colt's owner resided, scrawling a brief note of explanation at the same time. Here he made another little mistake, however, for the owner of the slain animal lived in an entirely different house, and it was some time before things got entirely straightened out.

Another man, a Vermont farmer this time, has every reason to believe that the hunting joke of the season in the Green Mountain State is on him. He had managed to entice a deer into his barnyard the day before the hunting season opened, intending to shoot him at the next dawn and dispatch early next morning. He was on hand, with his rifle, at daybreak, and the patient deer was still there, waiting for slaughter. The fact of the matter is that he had, however, and the rifle ball went through the side of the barn and killed a valuable horse.

Several hunters in Maine have been freed by an angry moose, and a farmer was actually chased indoors by one. A particularly aggravating case was that of two sportsmen who were pursued by a big wounded bear while out partridge shooting. While they were up in a tree waiting for bruin to recollect a more important engagement they saw two large black deer and a doe not far away and distinctly heard the bellow of a moose. The sequel to this incident was that they went back next day and secured a buck and a doe, while the bear was captured a little later.

While following deer tracks two hunters, Lynn Mass., went astray in the woods and for more than twenty-four hours were without shelter or food. They had to walk around a fire all night to keep from freezing. Next day they were found by guides. The hunting story most nearly approaching the typical "wild west" standard is that which comes from Bangor in the effect that the freeman of a train on the Sandy River and Rangeley Lakes railway, E. F. Vose, shot a deer from the cab of his engine, and it was a good sized one at that.

Women are heading "the call of the wild" in larger numbers every year, and a goodly contingent have been in the woods this season. Some of them have had excellent luck in bringing down big game.

Every successive hunting season has its "problem" at the wheel. This time it is what to do with the cow moose. As a result of the protective law the female moose is increasing so rapidly in Maine in proportion to its males that even the game officials are a little bit perplexed about it and are wondering how things are going to be equalized. The game commissioners are restocking the streams of the state with trout and salmon.

MONOMANIACS ARE MANY.

We Meet Them in Our Daily Life, Says Student of Insanity.

"In my judgment," says a student of insanity, "there are hundreds of people walking the streets of all the big cities today who are insane upon some one topic and who only need a reference to it in conversation or otherwise to throw them into a severe irrational tantrum, and my experience satisfies me that the majority are crowded with persons who appear to be the most reasonable beings on earth until their attention is directed toward some subject that disturbs their mental apparatus and makes them dangerous subjects.

"The most striking incident of this kind that I have ever come under my observation occurred when some years ago I was visiting an asylum in Edinburgh. I was introduced to a patient who had been a physician. He was intelligent, and I had a long conversation with him on general topics without the slightest knowledge on my part that he was a patient. When bidding him adieu I remarked that we were likely to have a beautiful moonlight night. In a second his whole demeanor changed. Instead of being a courteous, amiable gentleman he became a raving maniac and was quickly seized by several attendants. My simple allusion to the moon had done the mischief.

"It seems that this doctor, who had a large practice at one time, had become enamored of a study of astronomy and had for some years been endeavoring to invent a telescope which would enable him to get an interior view of the moon. He became crazy on that subject. His case was held to be incurable."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A FAMOUS CARPET.

The First One That Was Used in Old New York City.

"I haven't learned everything about my business yet," said the young carpet salesman, "but I've picked up some information that's interested even if it isn't new.

"For instance, not everybody knows that 'til' so very long ago—only about 200 years—that nobody had a carpet in New York city. They didn't use rushes strewn around for floor covering, as they used to do in England, partly, I suppose, because rushes, whatever they are, were not plentiful and partly because they preferred sand. Certainly sand sprinkled on a bare floor seems cleaner and better than a rug, and it has some advantages over a regular carpet. Anyhow, that was what they used in the houses of the aristocracy.

"But carpet came in fashion in New York at the very end of the seventeenth century, and the man who introduced the fashion was Captain Kidd. He wasn't a pirate then. He was captain of the Argus, a pirate ship plying between here and London, and was a citizen and a householder in this city. In 1692 he married Sarah Popham, the widow of another ship captain, and set up housekeeping in Hanover square, then an aristocratic quarter.

"In that house on the floor of the 'best room,' as they called it in those days, was the first carpet known to have been in use in New York. It was valued at $25, which doesn't seem very large even as money was then valued. That may not be an important fact, but it's interesting."—New York Times.

On Vacations.

It is related in Stewart Edward White's book, "The Mountains," that once upon a time a man happened to be staying in a hotel room which had originally been part of a suit, but which was then cut off from the others by a thin door, through which sounds carried clearly.

It was about 11 o'clock when the occupants of that next room came home. The man heard the door open and close. Then the bed shrieked aloud as somebody fell heavily upon it. There breathed across the silence a profoundly deathly sigh.

"Mary," said a man's voice, "I'm mighty sorry I didn't join that Association For Artificial Vacations. They undertake to get you just as tired and just as mad in two days as you could by yourself in two weeks."—Youth's Companion.

Stevenson and the Beggar.

While walking in London one afternoon Robert Louis Stevenson and Edmund Gosse met a stalwart beggar who, like Stevenson, was tall and stout. Stevenson, however, waved and finally handed him a sixpence. The man pocketed the coin, forlornly, to thank his benefactor, but, finding his eyes on Gosse, said in a loud voice, "And what is the other little gentleman going to give me?" "In future," said Stevenson, "you may depend on it that I shall be the other little gentleman."

The Wrong Place.

A shingle bustled up to St. Peter. "My good man," he said, "will you tell me where I must go to procure sovereign pot cards?"

And St. Peter, eying him sourly, told him where he could go to—Puck.

Losing Hair.

"A man loses his hair only once," remarked the observer of events and things, "but some women mislay theirs several times a week."—Yonkers Statesman.

More Important.

"Why weren't you at the mass meeting of the unemployed?"

"I was looking for a job."—Puck.

The nut who is standing up for you soon gets tired and sits down.—Athenaeum Globe.

Hunting a Homemaker.

By LULU JOHNSON.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

A mere toddler of a boy stood on the bank above the railroad track. In his hand was a stone. Aiming blindly, he tossed the stone upon the track, and it sailed against the gleaming rail.

In less than forty-eight hours that stone, thrown by a baby hand, had thrown Wall Street and the money market of the country into a panic.

The single track of the little western road afforded rough traveling. Not many of the travelers aboard that particular train even noticed the somewhat harder jolt when the car wheel struck the stone.

But Gilbert Fairbairn, smoking a "good night" cigar as he leaned alone against the railing of the observation car platform, felt the jar—and then felt nothing more.

And it was two weeks before Wall Street learned that Fairbairn, the one man who could have stopped the panic, had been found beside the tracks and removed to a farmhouse on the quarter section nearest the road.

For ten days he had been unconscious, and for two days or more he had been in no condition to be left alone. There was but one inmate of that farmhouse besides himself, and she had been too busy nursing him to make the trip to the nearest town to report that he had been found.

As soon as his whereabouts had been discovered the homeside little town was overrun with people. Grave and learned physicians from the east were hurried westward on special trains and a regiment of nurses attended them, but Fairbairn waved them all away.

"I don't need you," he said irritably. "Little Mrs. Bodington pulled me through without a lot of palaver or thousand dollar doctors to help her. I want a couple of nurses to wait on her, and the rest of you go away."

"There is an excellent hospital fifty miles from here," suggested the family physician. "Can you look after him?"

"You don't have to be," was the ardent response. "You are going to be packed out of here, the whole lot of you. I've spent most of my life with a doctor on one side of me and a lawyer on the other. I'm sick of it all, and I'm entitled to a rest."

He looked contentedly about the tiny room. The outlook from the narrow paneled windows was dreary, and the room itself was walled with rough plaster and decorated with cheap prints in homestead frames.

The bed on which he rested was a wooden affair with a cotton mattress and a couple of clean sheets, but the sheets were immaculately clean, and there was an air of hominess about the place that Fairbairn had not known in years.

He closed his eyes contentedly and dozed off. Sugden, mindful of his far fees, waited in differential silence during the half hour the nap lasted. Fairbairn's glance fell first on him as his eyes opened again.

"You still here," he cried. "Sugden, if you don't take the first train back to New York, I'll take it myself. I owe you a favor, and I'll take it on appeal and appeal until you spend every cent you ever made off of me. Now get out of here."

Sugden took his departure, vowing that his patient was insane, but Fairbairn only smiled contentedly and turned to the sweet-faced woman who sat beside the bed.

"That's the way to talk to those sharks," he declared. "I have a headache, and Sugden gives me something to make it worse. When he doctors me for the new disease and sends in a bill a yard long. This is the time I fooled him."

"I'm glad that you were not moved," said the woman softly. "I think that the excitement would have been bad for you."

"It is not the trip I was dreading," admitted Fairbairn frankly. "I like it here, and I want to stay a little while. My secretary will stay over in town and bring my important mail every day, and the two nurses will relieve you of the watchful nights."

"If you want anything else, buy it or hire it or something. Wilson will give you what money I need. Wilson is a fine fellow," he added. "He came into my office this fall as a clerk, and I took a fancy to him and made him my confidential man."

"It must be very nice to have someone to do your work the way you want it," said the woman. "I am glad that you are so pleased with him."

"I'm pleased with him," said Fairbairn meekly. "So long as you are not too well pleased with him?" he pleaded.

"No more than I am now," she promised. "He was convinced that money was omnipotent and that even here on the prairie he could purchase the love of the little woman who had made him so comfortable."

Fairbairn was in love with his beautiful woman comforts rather than with the woman herself, but this he did not know, although when she was longer any pretext for prolonging the stay, he spoke bravely enough.

"I need you very much," he said earnestly. "I have a job that covers half a square in the most expensive residential district in New York. I have three yachts, something like a dozen automobiles and all that sort of thing, but I have no home. Not since I was a boy have I realized what home was like. My wife was no home maker, and when she died I never dared repeat the experiment with the women in the art I lived in. You are different. For years I have been hungry. Don't you think that you can come and make it for me?"

"The little woman paused for a moment and scanned the face of the multimillionaire as earnestly as though she had not devoted weeks in that pursuit.

There was no ardent affection in tone or look. Fairbairn discussed the matter with as much feeling as though he was discussing the making of some railroad deal with his fellow magnates. He was not the young lover, but the elderly widower in need of a homemaker.

"The girl—she was little more than that—nodded her head in an affirmative.

"I'll make the home for you, but not as your wife. I am not a widow, you see."

"I am married," continued the girl hurriedly. "I married a boy who never had a home, and I made one for him—out here where nothing matters. He was home hungry. I knew that I would spoil all his chances if I married him. I also knew that he would spoil his own chances if I didn't, so I married him."

"After our boy was born—that was the second year we were here—he went back east and took a name that was neither his nor mine to show his father that he was able to work for the money he had made. I am married to you, Mr. Fairbairn. I guess you've forgotten that Gregory married Martha Bodington. From what Gregory told me, you called me everything but my right name at that last interview."

"Perhaps I did," was the shamefaced reply. "I guess I did not know what I was saying, and I'm certain that I didn't know the sort of a girl I was talking about."

"We'll forget that now," offered Martha. "Let the past be forgotten for the sake of the future."

"But Gregory?" asked Fairbairn. "There," Martha pointed out over the prairie, where the secretary was to be seen riding across the section with the mail.

"Ald Wilson is Gregory? You mean to say I didn't know my own boy when I hired him?" asked Fairbairn, with a chuckle. "To think that the first time he has been here I've been fretting because I feared that you might learn to love him. And all that time you were married to him. I'm rather proud of my dear, that I made my second marriage by proxy, so long as you will make a home for Greg and the boy and me."

"I was so afraid that you would recognize Greg," said Martha as she regarded the tall figure of the secretary with a look of frank admiration.

"He assumed an excellent disguise," rejoined Fairbairn. "I never thought to find my son a worker, my dear. That's another thing I have to thank you for, and Fairbairn sighed with relief. He had found a home while retaining his domestic independence, and the son for whom his heart cried out was restored to him again.

Changes in Boston.

In 1630 one of the suburbs of Boston was New Towne, which in 1638 this changes to Cambridge and in 1692 to seat of Harvard university has an international reputation today. Since the early lines were fixed Cambridge obtained by annexation a part of Charlestown, but has called him to the towns of Waltham, Brighton, Watertown, Belmont and West Cambridge, the latter now known as Arlington.

The Boston of 1630, called Tri-Mountain, was very different from the Boston of today. Its area was not extensive, although it included the larger portion of Quincy, out of which the town of Braintree was made at a later period. The first annexations to Boston were Noddies Island (East Boston) and the territory now covered by Chelsea.

In 1640 Boston lost its rights in Quincy, which were acquired by the town of Braintree. Subsequent additions to Boston have been Roxbury, Dorchester, West Roxbury, Brighton, Charlestown and a part of Brookline.

As an independent municipality Charlestown, which was settled as early as Boston, gave birth to Somerville, Woburn, Malden, Stoneham and Melford and furnished land to Cambridge—Boston Post.

Value of the Architect.

The members of a country club, the building and decoration of whose clubhouse had been placed entirely in the hands of the architect, even to the minutest furnishings, found themselves in need of new window shades and a new other small household necessities, they sent for the architect to come out and look things over and order appropriate fittings.

"That is not at all an unusual case," said the architect. "I can show you houses that I planned more than twenty-five years ago that have never been furnished with so much as a new chair without my being consulted first. Having deferred entirely to my judgment in the first place, those concerned are afraid to trust their own taste in the smallest matter, and they will probably continue to ask my advice in every little detail of decoration as long as they occupy the house."—New York Times.

When the back aches and throbs. When housework is torture. When night brings no rest nor sleep. When urinary disorders set in. When a woman is a weary one. There is a way to escape these woes.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure such ills. Mr. A. T. Lee, living two miles from Elkton, Ky., says: "Kidney disease has rendered me practically helpless and I could not turn over in bed without assistance. My back was racked with agonizing pains and I scarcely had enough strength to move. The kidney secretions were irregular in action, and at times very unnatural in appearance. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills so highly advertised, my husband procured a box for me and I used them. The first dose gave me relief, and as I continued using them I steadily improved until I was made as well and strong as I had ever been."

NIGHT RIDERS WILL DEFEND ON ALIBIS

Nearly a Hundred Denizens of Reel Foot Lake to Testify.

Union City, Tenn., Dec. 24.—When court adjourned the state had nearly completed its case against the eight alleged night riders now on trial for the murder of Captain Quinten Ranken. It will put Frank Fehringer on the stand. He was one of the riders and has made a complete confession. He says he was present when the murder was committed and knows the name of every man present. After that state will merely fill in with corroborative testimony. The defense will depend solely upon alibis and for that purpose has summoned nearly a hundred denizens of Reel Foot Lake to testify as to the whereabouts of the indicted men on the night of Oct. 10.

Pineules for the kidneys are little golden globules which act directly on the kidneys. A trial will convince you of quick results for backache, rheumatism, lumbago and tired, worn-out feeling. 30 days' trial $1. They purify the blood. Sold by Anderson-Fowler Drug Co., Incorporated.

Royalty and Race Horses. The ownership of race horses by royalty is a very old institution. Queen Anne, although she was the mother of an enormous family, not one of whom lived to grow up, was a patron of racing and was a cup at York on the eve of her death. George IV. was passionately fond of it, and news of what had happened at Ascot was brought to him when he was lying on his deathbed. Apart from his love of the sport, the king follows the turf because he is astute enough to see that it is a pursuit which interests a great number of his fellow subjects.—London Opinion.

BRYAN GAINED IN POPULAR VOTE

William H. Hearst's Party
Polls 83,185 Votes
In All.

SOCIALISTS FALL OFF.

Populist Party Almost Wiped
Out By The Poor
Showing Made.

New York.—The total popular vote of the various presidential candidates at the last national election was made known to-day in an official form by the filing of the last of the official votes, that of Michigan. The total shows the following:

Taft, Republican, 7,637,676. Bryan, Democrat, 6,393,182. Debs, Socialist, 448,453. Chafin, Prohibitionist, 241,252. Higen, Independent, 33,186. Watson, Populist, 33,871. Gilhaus, Socialist-Labor, 15,421. Total for all candidates, 14,842,239.

This grand total exceeds by 341,531 the total number of votes cast in the presidential election 1904, when the grand total was 13,510,708.

Compared with that election, the candidates of the Democratic and Socialist parties increased their votes this year.

The reverse is true of the candidates of the Republican, Populist and Socialist-Labor parties. The Independence party did not figure in the presidential election of four years ago.

The biggest difference in a party vote is shown in an increase for Bryan of 1,315,211 over the total vote cast in 1904 for Alton B. Parker, the Democratic candidate. Taft received 14,190 votes more than were polled for President Roosevelt in 1904 and Debs ran 45,368 ahead of his predecessor on the Socialist ticket.

The heaviest loss is shown by the Populists, who with the same candidates registered 83,312 votes less this year than in 1904, when their total was 117,135. The Prohibitionist candidate, Chafin, ran 17,234 votes behind the 1904 mark of his party, and Gilhaus, the Socialist-Labor candidate, received only about 50 per cent. of the vote given to previous presidential year.

FIGHTS MADE THINGS LIVELY

Negroes Had General Battle at Fidelity and Five Were Shot.

SOME OF THEM MAY DIE

Several Other Holiday Fights in Which Blood Was Spilled.

As stated in Friday's paper, the Christmas fights opened with the killing of Kirk McCoy by Eugene Ferguson, at a colored festival in the city Wednesday night. This was followed by a regular battle between two sets of negroes at Fidelity Station, near Bolivar, about 4:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon, in which five men were shot, some of them very seriously. The negroes became belligerent on the train going out of Hopkinsville and upon reaching Fidelity they left the train ready to begin fighting. No one knows just how the fight started, or what it was about, but there was soon a free fight in progress about the depot and when the smoke cleared away four negroes were lying on the ground. It is not known how many took part in the battle, but about 75 shots were fired and other weapons were used with more or less effect. One negro named Tom Sanders was hit over the head with a jug of whiskey and the jug was broken and in the mix-up that followed the same negro caught a bullet in his head, but was not dangerously hurt. John Garrett was shot in the leg, like Garrett in the bullet, Charlie Sanders in the back, the bullet going into his cavity, and Eugene Garrett was shot through the lungs.

Two of the negroes were too badly hurt to be taken to the hospital and spent the night in Dr. Bell's office, where they were attended to. None of them can give any very straight account of the trouble, except that all were drinking and their quarrel ended in fighting and shooting. There was one good pistol, a Colt's 38, in the crowd and this pistol got in its work on Tom Sanders. Another pistol was of the Iver-Johnson make and some of the wounds were inflicted by its bullets.

All of the negroes were still alive yesterday, and three of them were out of danger.

Money At Owensboro.

Tobacco deliveries in Owensboro during the past four days have been among the largest in the history of the city, especially the first and second days of the week. The deliveries on Thursday were heavy but the rush was not near as great as on the preceding days of the week. As a result of the heavy deliveries of tobacco before Christmas there has been a large amount of money put in circulation.—Owensboro Messenger.

We have the reputation of being the quickest payers of losses.

Got a Scalp Wound.

Jerry Pettus, a negro boy, was shot or hit with a pistol in Jones & Cannon's saloon on Avenue A, Christmas, by a white man named Sizemore, who escaped and has not been arrested. Pettus had a slight scalp wound and could not tell whether he was shot or hit by the pistol, which was discharged either intentionally or in striking the negro's head.

IN NEW TERRITORY.

Tobacco Culture to be Taken Up in Many Tenn. Counties.

Jackson county, Tenn., raised a good deal of tobacco this year for the first time. A dispatch says: "Never before has so much tobacco been raised here and never was the quality so good, and the prices so high. Already about $40,000 has been paid to the farmers for their crops, and not half the crop has been marketed, moreover other buyers are at work in this territory. The tobacco industry is a godsend to the people, especially the tenant, because he can rent a farm, plant a few acres in tobacco and with this pay his rent, all expenses and still have money left. It therefore practically gives the renter all he can make on the farm."

A dispatch from Green county Tenn., says:

"The tobacco sales here during the past week have been heavy. It is estimated that the Burley crop in this section will amount to a half million pounds, four-fifths of which has been sold. It is estimated that the fire cured tobacco will amount to about the same of which scarcely more than one-fifth has been sold. One farmer realized for the Burley tobacco raised on one acre $400. A large crop of Burley will be planted next year and the crop will probably amount to five million pounds."

This report comes from Dickson county, Tenn.: "The projectors of the Dickson Warehouse and Tobacco Company, it is understood, will within the next two weeks of less take the preliminary steps to establish their enterprise here. It is learned also that the company will lease a vast amount of outland in Dickson county and import tobacco growers if a sufficient amount of home labor cannot be obtained to cultivate the project, if carried out, will be a big acquisition for not only this town, but for Dickson county as well."

Williamson county, Tenn., is to take up tobacco culture and a special says:

"The development of this county as a tobacco market seems to be an assured fact within the present and coming season, and it is thought this will be one of the best moves possible to make for the citizens of the county and the merchants of the town and county as well. The J. C. Moore warehouse has been leased for the season by the Nashville Tobacco Works, and Mr. Oliver Brittain has been stationed here with an office and warehouse forces in charge. Mr. Brittain has been through the county and has purchased between thirty and forty thousand pounds of tobacco, the first load of which was delivered last Saturday, and about 10,000 pounds has been delivered since. The average price of Burley paid has been about 8 cents per pound, and higher grades have reached up as high as 14 cents. It is the intention of those interested to encourage the raising of this staple in the county and to this end will distribute seed to the farmers."

We represent none but the best insurance companies. Quick settlement, our motto.

HIGGINS & SON.

The Big Regie Sale.

The big sale of Association tobacco to Regie buyers the week before Christmas amounted to about 2,500 hogsheds. About 1400 hogsheds of this number were sold at Mayfield and Paducah, while nearly seven hundred were sold at Clarksville to buyers from the Italian contractor, Guthrie sold 125 hogsheds and Princeton 113.

The Tobacco Planter Says: The total number of pounds of tobacco was nearly 4,000,000 and with the prospects ahead for other big sales in the near future it seems that the clouds are fast rolling away and that the future of the Planter's Protective Association is indeed, a bright one. The Imperial deal has by no means fallen through, and all reports that it has been hauled out on the fact that the transaction is one involving long delay in the examination of samples at widely separated salesrooms. There is every prospect that the sale will be made.

We write insurance policies without the riot clause.

See Your Heart Beat.

It may be comforting or otherwise to a man to have a cinematograph reproduction of his heart beats, but he can have it if he wishes, thanks to a Dutchman's cleverness. This is how it is worked: First find your heart. Place against it a stethoscope. This will intensify the beating and move an oscillograph. This in its turn has its movements photographed on a film, and there you are! It would be invaluable as applied to a witness in the box, so that the jury could see what was going on when the cross examination became very hot—Modern Science.

The Tallest Actress.

The distinction of being the tallest actress belongs to Miss Irene Smith, who plays La Belle Rax in the new Harry Lane drama. She stands six feet one and one-half inches in her stockings. It seems somewhat incongruous that she should wear high heels, her hair brushed high over a pad and a high hat in order to give a greater impression of height. This is, however, what she does so as to realize the description of being six feet four inches in height, in accordance with the design of the authors.—London Tit-Bits.

Leprosy in a Cow.

A cow has been found apparently suffering from leprosy. Her ears were quite bloodless and were cut off by her without any further harm. The possibility of milk being consumed by human beings from a leprosy cow is terrible to think of.—Natal Afrikaner.

Very Game.

A lady who had made a tour of England told a quaint story about a precocious boy.

"They are very precocious indeed," she said, "those little chaps from Eton and Rugby, with their round, sober faces and their quiet air."

"A very pretty American girl was talking one evening in London to one of these urchins."

"And have you got a sweetheart yet, Tommy?" she said playfully.

"No," said Tommy. "Still I'm game enough for a bit of spooning, if that's what you're after."

Asylum Patient.

Joe Faith, a patient at the Western Kentucky Asylum from Webster county, died at the institution Saturday. The remains were shipped to Sebree Sunday for burial.

Deputy Constables.

Constable Thos. S. Winfree, of the South Hopkinsville district, has appointed as deputies former police officers Booth Morris and Joe Claxton.

Training.

"My dear," intimated Mrs. Jawback, "why do you make such a fuss when our daughter asks you for a little money that she really needs?"

"My dear," responded Mrs. Jawback, "I'm training her. She's going to be married soon, and she should be prepared for the kind of thing I have to go through every day." The silence was oppressive.

LABOR LEADERS SENT TO JAIL

President Compers Must Serve a Sentence of One Year.

IN THE CONTEMPT CASE

Secretary Morrison, of the Federation of Labor, Given Lowest Sentence.

The famous contempt case of the Buck's Store and Range Company against President Compers, Vice President Mitchell and Secretary Morrison, of the American Federation of Labor, was decided Dec. 23 by Justice Wright, of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, adversely to the federation officials. Compers was sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment, Mitchell to nine months and Morrison to six months.

The case grew out of the alleged boycott of the company's products and the putting of the company on the unfair list, and the federation's alleged violation of Judge Gould's recent mandamus has attracted wide attention.
